LUXEMBOURG DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION IN LAOS

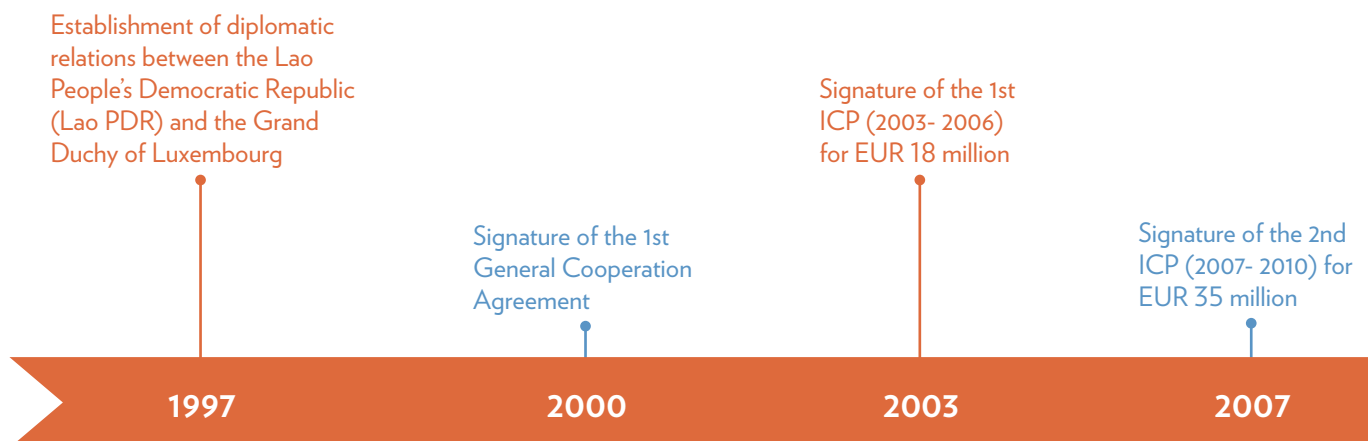

The first cooperation projects between Luxembourg and Lao PDR were launched in 1997, formalised by a general cooperation agreement in 2000. Over the years, four multi-annual programmes, called Indicative Cooperation Programmes (ICP) have been implemented. Those programmes define the strategy, interventions, and priority areas in each partner country. Currently, the 5th ICP is ongoing (2023-2027). Signed in 2021, it is supported by a budget exceeding EUR 95 million. The programme adopts a strategic approach, which links the activities in the different priority sectors through the integrated development of human capital, including by promoting institutional strengthening and good governance.

The four priority areas include:

- health and nutrition;
- local development;
- skills development for tourism, agriculture, and forestry; and
- Rule of Law, access to justice and good governance.

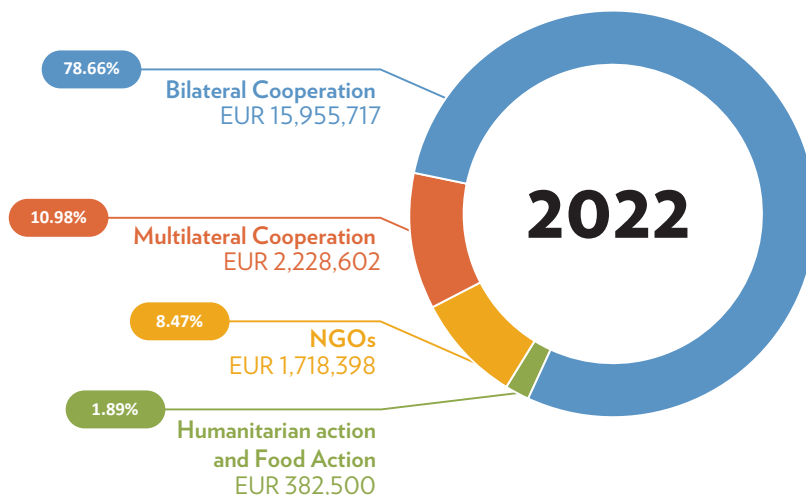

Luxembourg focuses its activities on the four priority provinces of Bokeo, Bolikhamxay, Khammouane, and Vientiane. Throughout the activities, particular emphasis is placed on human rights, gender equality, environmental protection and the fight against climate change, and the use of digital technologies. Together with its partners, including LuxDev, UN Agencies, NGOs, as well as academic and private partners, Luxembourg’s Development Cooperation remains committed to eradicate extreme poverty, while ‘leaving no one behind’.

EVOLUTION OF FUNDS DISBURSED

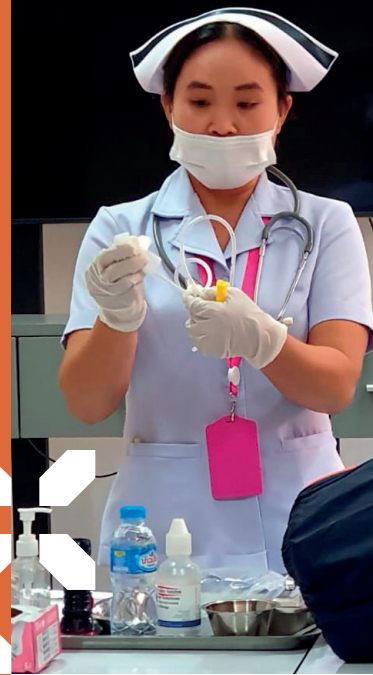

HEALTH AND NUTRITION

Since 1997, Luxembourg's Development Cooperation, has been working with partners to support the Lao government in providing basic and good-quality health services. The main objective is to improve the access to essential health services, which are affordable for all, particularly for the most vulnerable. Our projects therefore focus on marginalised populations, including members of ethnic minorities and people living in remote locations. While the pivotal domain of Mother and Child Health remains at the forefront of our efforts, the aspect of nutrition has been added in the current ICP V to address malnutrition challenges in Lao PDR.

Among a whole range of activities, Luxembourg:

- supports quality, efficiency and sustainability of reproductive, maternal, newborn, child and adolescent health (RMNCAH) service delivery;
- supports young people through scholarships for long and short-term studies in clinical and health-related disciplines;
- promotes a high standard of quality of infrastructure and care in selected district hospitals;
- raises standards by enhancing medical treatment and nursing administration in selected healthcare facilities;
- promotes on-the-job training by skilled nurse-midwife teams;
- supports the blood cold chain in Lao PDR through specialised equipment;
- provides high quality expertise in the cardiology sector;
- works towards universal health care by strengthening the social security and health insurance systems.

RULE OF LAW, ACCESS TO JUSTICE AND GOOD GOVERNANCE

Since 2010, Luxembourg's Development Cooperation has been committed to supporting the Lao Government in strengthening how laws are followed and decisions are made, with the aim to promote access to justice for everyone. Together with its partners, Luxembourg actively assists the Lao government in its ambition to shift from creating laws to actually putting them into practice and to strengthen its legal education system to train the next generation of professionals. Additional support is provided to improve the quality of data and analysis for policy making, and to share the expertise of Luxembourg's financial sector with Lao counterparts.

The Lao-Luxembourg development cooperation works at the central and the local level by:

- strengthening the academic environment at key legal institutions to produce quality legal research, e.g. through curriculum development and implementation, modernised infrastructure and facilities, and student and lecturer exchange programmes;
- training justice and financial sector professionals in a wide range of fields, including the Criminal Procedure Code, anti-corruption and anti-money laundering, and transnational crime;
- establishing and supporting 32 Legal Aid Offices on district and provincial levels to improve access to justice, especially for the most vulnerable in remote areas;
- disseminating legal information, services, and campaigns;
- enhancing the physical environment and legal rights of prisoners in the carceral jail system;
- improving the production of reliable statistics that comply with international standards;
- training professionals of the financial sector on topics like risk management or Anti-money laundering/ Counter financing of terrorism.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Luxembourg's Development Cooperation has been a longstanding partner of the Lao government in offering relevant and accessible Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) services to young people, job seekers, and entrepreneurs, with a special focus on women and youth from disadvantaged backgrounds. Luxembourg's efforts focus on the hospitality and tourism sector, and have been extended to the agriculture and forestry sector, as these are major economic drivers in Lao PDR and demonstrate a high potential for inclusive, green and digital growth. In order to improve the competitiveness of Lao PDR's workforce and small business sector and the low uptake of TVET services, Luxembourg's Development Cooperation, together with Switzerland and the European Union:

- provides technical and financial assistance to public and private TVET providers;
- fosters the availability and accessibility of courses including through the provision of scholarships for students from disadvantaged backgrounds;
- enhances the alignment of curricula with current and future industry needs through a strengthened monitoring of labour market trends;
- supports learners in the transition from training to employment ;
- supports the development of appropriate multi-media platforms to reach and mobilise potential TVET students;
- fosters investment in digital and online TVET products and service delivery.

LOCAL DEVELOPMENT

Through its Local Development Programme co-financed by Switzerland, and through its support to multilateral and civil society agencies, Luxembourg's Development Cooperation contributes to reducing poverty in the rural upland areas of Laos PDR, where communities face increasing threats. These include land tenure insecurity, deforestation, lack of access to water, and low education outcomes. Luxembourg encourages local communities to take charge of their development by involving them in planning and by co-financing the realisation of development priorities at the district and village levels. Luxembourg's Development Cooperation thereby supports the Lao government in the sustainable transformation of rural Laos by:

- fostering agricultural investments and access to markets for smallholder farmers;
- ensuring access to clean water and sanitation;
- bolstering the construction of rural roads and infrastructure such as schools and dormitories;
- promoting inclusive village credit schemes and access to finance;
- strengthening land tenure security, climate change adaptation, and preparedness for disasters;
- clearing unexploded ordnance (UXO) in affected communities;
- supporting the development of farming and business skills.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Complementary to its bilateral and civil society projects, Luxembourg also supports regional programmes that address a range of issues, from financial sector development, environmental protection and climate action to social protection and access to healthcare. As such, Luxembourg supports Lao PDR and other countries in the region in:

- ensuring sound management of the Mekong basin while fostering inclusive economic development that is socially just, while protecting the environment;
- enabling small farmers, especially those from ethnic minorities, to have sustainable and equitable access to land and control over their agricultural and forestry land;
- extending social security and healthcare coverage;
- and assisting microfinance institutions in strengthening their social and environmental performance.
