Why are microfinance & inclusive finance important?

Luxembourg is convinced that microfinance has a positive impact in the fight against poverty, contributes to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and is a means of leveraging ODA. Luxembourg contributes to the efforts made towards regulating the market for inclusive finance and supports various initiatives to promote transparency in these markets and the protection of its customers.

Luxembourg also uses microfinance and inclusive finance tools to contribute to the protection of the environment and to promote the use of renewable energy.

When inclusive finance is applied more consistently by development actors and the private sector, microfinance institutions and financial centres can deploy their potential in centres of expertise such as Luxembourg.

Luxembourg - highly committed

Over the past two decades, Luxembourg has actively supported the development of microfinance and inclusive finance as tools for fostering development and eradicating poverty. Luxembourg's aim is to give disadvantaged populations access to basic financial services such as borrowing, savings, money transfer and microinsurance. Luxembourg has become a major global player in the field and remains firmly committed to supporting its locally based microfinance institutions and NGO's, most of which can be found in the Maison de la microfinance in Luxembourg City. In 2016, the Luxembourg Government allocated 10 million euros of Official Development Assistance (ODA) to inclusive finance activities.
